Meeting and spending several days with the Brown family was a surreal experience that I will never forget. The Browns are pioneers of civil liberty as much as all others who have thrown themselves on the sword for social change. For several years I wanted the opportunity to meet the Browns just to say "Thank you! You have made our lives better!". Imagine how surreal it felt when I was driving between job sites and my phone rang: "Hi Nathan, this is Kody Brown"; I was stupefied. It wasn't Kody's celebrity status that had me tripping over every word; it was the sum total of the impact his efforts have had on my life and family.

I never would have believed that one day I would be grilling on my back deck with Kody, and while we were sitting there I remember never once feeling like I was spending time with a celebrity. Kody is an "irregular regular Joe". What I mean by that is that although his life certainly isn't typical, sitting there with him was comparable to sitting there with an old friend.

Meri has a better understanding of The Principle than anyone I have ever met. Her insight and wisdom was truly impressive. I wish there had been more time to gain from her knowledge and experience.

I will never forget my interactions with Janelle. She has so much class and tact that I often found myself literally in awe. I remember watching her interact with my wives thinking "there's a whole lot of class in this room!".

Christine has a natural, perpetual energy that just radiates from within. I was able to charge my mobile phone just by standing close to her. No, really. 😊

Meeting Robyn was a pleasant surprise. There is so much more depth in Robyn than comes out on TV. Being previously limited to footage from the show I had no idea. You think you know someone when you've watched them on TV for several years, but if you only know Robyn from what you've seen of her on TV, you don't really know Robyn at all.

The Brown children were all incredibly well behaved and very respectful. The Browns have done an amazing job with their children; we were all very impressed. I've never seen a child brush off a wasp sting like Truly did; that's one tough kid! Dayton was one of the most well mannered, respectful and appreciative teenagers that I've ever met.

Worth noting, I had driven that truck the day before to the gas station to fuel it up (in case Kody wanted to take it for a drive) and there were no wasps in it then. I had also knocked down a wasp nest from outside of my garage. I'm guessing the wasps relocated to the truck at that time.

I think most of all, I enjoyed meeting Kody's mom. We sat off camera chatting for what must have been hours. She has such a unique way of expressing herself and telling her life's story. After each sentence I found myself waiting for the next one. She is such an awesome lady that we could all learn from.

It was a sincere pleasure all the way around and one that we'll look back on fondly. After rescheduling the visit once, we had a massive hail storm that destroyed our roof and siding as well as doing thousands of dollars in damage to our vehicles. We didn't want to appear on national TV with a home that looked like it was in a war zone and the logistics involved in getting it repaired in a matter of weeks was pretty crushing. We were literally still putting the house back together 30 minutes prior to their arrival.

The picture was taken on the back lot of our rural property. This is my "thinking spot" (nothing can stress you when you are sitting there overlooking the terrain) and is the same location you'll see in many of my pictures.

I've always said that life is a series of adventures, and this was our latest. I don't yet know where our next adventure will take us, but I know that our work is only just beginning.

Fearing social prejudice and condemnation, when I originally married my wives we had private and somewhat secretive ceremonies out of necessity, not shame. After hiding our family for over a decade, a couple years into living openly as a proud plural family we invited our friends and family to join us for a "dual wedding do-over" in early 2012 (hard to believe this was three years ago!). Although I have shared this link in a limited manner in the past, to create and promote transparency and awareness I'm now sharing it unrestricted.

From civil rights to suffrage, prohibition to slavery, no social injustice has ever righted itself without those willing to sacrifice for the greater good. The Brown family, the Dargers, the Williams family and many others sacrificed their privacy to create awareness of functional plural marriage and they have taken this noble effort farther than I ever thought I would see it in my lifetime. I am truly indebted to them all.

It is now my turn to throw myself on the metaphorical sword in an effort to continue to build upon the work that so many others have begun. With the blessings and support of my wife Vicki, my wife Christine and I are heading into the Yellowstone County Courthouse today to apply for a Montana marriage license using the Marriage Equality Act as a basis for our claim.

I don't know what to expect or how this will be handled. I expect the application to be denied after which I will file a civil rights lawsuit in federal court. We could possibly be arrested and caged for daring to attempt to legitimize our marriage legally.

My stomach is in knots but I remind myself that this is necessary for change. Please keep us in your hearts.

I've still not received a phone call from the county attorney on their decision to grant or deny our license to marry. I have been unofficially informed through other sources however that they are discussing charging me criminally. I knew the risks I faced when I asked the State to grant legal legitimacy to my family, and I accepted those risks. I only ask that if their intent is to lock me in a cage (and we wonder why they keep asking for more money to expand the jails?!?!?) over my family dynamic, contact me privately and I will walk in your front door. I have no reason to run or hide. Please, don't kick my door in and shoot my dogs. 😞

I'm truly saddened that in "the land of the free" I have to make such a request, and all over building a family that's different from "normal". You can believe that the entire nation is and will be watching your choices and actions. There is no honor in destroying functional families.

I write for another site where I cover TV shows. I write about "Sister Wives" and "My Five Wives" along with several other shows that I watch. Recently "Sister Wives" featured a family from Montana that openly practiced polygamy. Knowing I was going to write about them, I began chatting with them on Facebook and reading their pages and comments.

The husband, Nathan Collier, was open and honest both in our discussions and on the TV show when he and his two wives appeared on it. Other than the fact that he has two wives, the family was just like any other family. He and his two wives are hard working people and have happy, healthy kids. There is a lot of love in the household.

I personally do not practice polygamy, nor do I have any desire too. But then again, I have been single for over five years and have no desire to have a husband, period. That's my choice, even though many do not agree with my decision to stay single, since my husband passed away. I am not hurting anyone by not having a spouse, just as Nathan is not hurting anyone by having two spouses

I have thought a lot about all of the different units that make up a family these days, and have to wonder why polygamy is judged so harshly, and is even still illegal. People who practice polygamy can be jailed and their children taken from them, just because a man is sharing his life with more than one woman.

Yes, I know that there are polygamists out there who force young girls into the lifestyle and rule with an iron hand in cult type communities. I certainly don't agree with that, but there are horrible types of men in every walk of life. Some men in a monogamous relationship treat their wives and children horribly by beating them and insisting on being the "man of the house."

We have pedophiles and rapists treating children and woman horribly. We have men that cheat on their wives and keep a mistress on the side for years. At least an honest, upstanding man who practices polygamy takes care of all of his wives and children and they are all aware of the situation and in agreement about their lifestyle.

Polygamy: Whose busine...

The family unit has evolved so much over the years, that there are many different kinds of families. We have single woman, and yes, even single men, adopting children and raising them alone. We have two women falling in love and having children together. We have men living together in a romantic relationship.

Young girls are getting pregnant and raising their babies alone, or with the help of parents. We have interracial relationships and marriages, some states have legalized gay marriages. All of this was taboo in years past. Young girls who got pregnant before marriage were an embarrassment to the family and were often sent away to "boarding" school.

They don't have to live in fear of the law everyday of their lives like a family who practices polygamy does. A man that cheats on his wife and hides a mistress, or several of them, doesn't live in fear of being arrested, though he may live in fear of the wife finding out. The wife, the husband and the mistress are living a life full of lies and deceit.

At least most families that choses polygamy, all does it of their own free will and they are all honest and open about the situation. Again, before any...

Polygamy: Whose busine...

and open about the situation. Again, before any one starts commenting on the bad situations in polygamy, I am well aware that there are some polygamist families that aren't ideal.

But, that is individual situations, not polygamy as a whole. Just as not all monogamous marriages, or any family units, are all good or bad. We shouldn't stereotype the way a person lives because of words like single, gay, black, white or even polygamy, we should look at it as individual situations.

I wouldn't personally have any interest in a romantic relationship with another woman, but that doesn't mean I think badly about someone who chooses that lifestyle. It's not my life, so why should I care? As long as people are happy, healthy and loved, why should society care what they do? They have their own homes, or how many women share the same man?

Feel free to comment with your thoughts, but please, no bashing, name calling or rudeness. This is written as an opinion piece and just as you are entitled to your opinion on the topic of polygamy, this writer is too.

While we never wanted to be associated with abusive fringe polygamy groups like the FLDS anyway, we were a little surprised when the fundies went on record as being against our efforts of legitimizing plural marriage. I labored trying to figure this out when a friend suggested something that I hadn't even considered.

Fringe fundie groups/churches view wives as a commodity. When a man in those groups passes away his wives are "redistributed" to other men. By granting legal legitimacy to plural wives, the church would have to cede power and control over them. Realizing this only strengthens our resolve.

Today we received notification from the county attorney that our marriage license has officially been denied. 😞

Our next step is to hire an attorney to file a civil rights lawsuit on our behalf. We will now begin a careful and deliberate process of finding the right attorney to represent us. We don't want one simply willing to take our case; we want to find one who believes in what we are doing. Recommendations on finding the right attorney would be much appreciated.

We thank you all for your continued support and will keep you notified as this progresses.

After weeks of struggle weighing the risks and benefits to determine if we were strong enough to endure the stresses and expenses of the discrimination lawsuit for having been denied a marriage license, the time has come to either step up or step aside.

After reaching out only to hit one roadblock after another after another (nobody wanted to touch polygamy!), today we retained a Utah based attorney and are filing suit in U.S. District Court in Billings, Montana. We're currently awaiting approval for my attorney to practice in the 9th District and we fully expect the suit to be filed within the coming weeks.

I cannot overstate the impact this has had on our family (mentally, emotionally, financially, etc.) but we know we are doing the right thing and we use this awareness to carry us through those times when we want to give up. We cannot thank you enough for the friendship, love and support you all have shown us; this is what carries us when we feel alone in the world.

I recently met a wife who came from an abusive plural marriage. When she finally reached her breaking point and she refused to accept the abuse any longer she was put out into the street with nothing. The entire validity of her marriage was subject to the will of a very bad man. This is a prime example of why we must fight this fight. Giving legal legitimacy to plural marriage gives legitimacy to plural wives and protects their interests. Giving legal legitimacy to plural wives will diminish abuses that flourish under the current laws.

Obviously the ideal solution would be to get government out of the marriage business altogether. Nobody needs government sanctioning of their own families.

That said, that horse has left the barn; government is too deeply entwined with marriage to ever expect them to cede authority (when has government ever willingly ceded authority over anything?). So long as government continues to regulate marriage, our position is that ALL wives deserve the exact same legal legitimacy afforded first wives and this is the motivation behind our fight to achieve true marriage equality.

With this, I find myself at odds with various other plygs from many different backgrounds. They want decriminalization of plural marriage, but not legal legitimacy in the form of licensure. I understand why various sects like the FLDS are against me; granting legal legitimacy would force them to cede control over the women in their church thus preventing them from redistributing/trading wives like commodities. What I struggle to understand is why so many plygs who are independent of church control (or belong to churches with less control over their wives) are so passionately against giving their wives legal passionately against giving their wives legal legitimacy. This continues to peak my curiosity, but I may have figured that out.

Is it because it would be more difficult to have multiple wives drawing public assistance if they were legally tied to the same husband? If we stop with decriminalization it removes the aspect of prosecution while still enabling abusers to abuse the system.

Is it because some men don't take their plural marriages as seriously as their wives do, and by not being legally bound it makes it easier to walk away from her when times get tough and send her packing with nothing?

Is it a combination?

I would implore all plural wives to join our fight which serves to give the husband no legal advantage. In fact, our fight increases legal liability for the husband compelling him to only marry additional wives when he is willing to put his own ass on the metaphorical legal hook.

Wives, I would ask you to help us legitimize plural marriage (for those who are legitimate) by simply spreading the word. Lawyers and judges and courtrooms aren't responsible for the Marriage Equality Act; SOCIAL MEDIA is. Social media is the most powerful source of creating awareness available today. We just filed our federal lawsuit seeking TRUE marriage equality in U.S. District Court in Billings, Montana. The U.S. Marshal's Service should be serving the defendants in the very near future after which we will prepare to have our lives changed forever in many ways, both good and bad. No matter how this turns out I know that we will be on the right side of history and I cannot imagine anyone I would rather face this with than my wives who have loved me through everything and stood beside me even when some would say that they shouldn't have. We are fighting for the right for our family to simply exist without fear of prosecution for nothing more than being a family; I cannot imagine a greater cause worth fighting for.

Today the State requested a thirty day extension to respond to our lawsuit. I told them my instincts are against allowing the extension; why would I willingly give them more time to form a better argument against legitimizing my family?

Ultimately I allowed the extension (the judge would have likely granted it anyway) and will use the time questioning and hopefully validating our commitment.

A few days late posting this, our latest news. The report is misworded in that the court has not made a decision on the motion to dismiss. I find the State claim that there is no reasonable threat of prosecution to be silly. If we aren't living under any threat of prosecution, why does the law exist at all? This is exactly what we are challenging. The denial of licensure was also challenged; I'd like to know how they arrive at these conclusions and I hope the judge sees through their attempt at denying us our due process.

The Colliers would like to announce and express our sincere gratitude to our family attorney Ellie Swanson who is now taking over our lawsuit against the State of Montana for denying our marriage license. We know that this is an uphill battle and considering the professional hits we have taken since going public we have been truly blessed with an attorney who is willing to represent us Pro bono. Before we filed our original lawsuit I spoke with literal dozens of Montana based attorneys and nobody wanted to touch plural marriage even as paid representation (how's that for making one feel dirty?). For Ellie to take this Pro bono, against all odds and everything working against us, is incredible. We can never fully express our gratitude and how thankful we are to have her on our team.

TV Replacements Waiting in the Wings

TLC already has another family lined up to take the Sister Wives slot! Montana polygamist Nathan Collier and wives Victoria and Christine (above) made headlines in 2015 for citing gay marriage as a legal argument to allow multiple spouses. They appeared on a Sister Wives episode that year, and the network wants them to stay. "Kody's been really nasty with the Colliers," says Kendra. "He won't talk to them."

We're guests on the Netflix series "Chelsea", Season 1 Episode 77 sub-title "You're Basically A Piece Of Meat", around twelve minutes in. Please keep in mind that when six hours of conversation is edited down to five minutes, context is lost.

The Crown has demanded my presence; as a result, Bighorn Refrigeration will be closed all day today while I subject myself to 8 hours of interrogation for seeking almighty permission simply to call my family my family without fear of being locked in a cage. My apologies for any inconveniences that result from my unavailability today. Please hold any calls that can wait until tomorrow. For any that can't wait, I'd refer you over to RC Refrigeration of Billings

The wheels of our marriage license lawsuit are slowly beginning to turn. Christine and Vicki will spend all day today in depositions answering intrusive, very personal questions and Nathan will spend all day tomorrow doing the same thing.

After everything is said and done, I enjoyed today. I was afforded the opportunity to stand in the face of those who would cage me for daring to commit to my plural family in spite of their unjust laws and I got to talk about how incredible my wives and children are, and how fortunate and honored I am to serve them, and I got to do this for hours to a captive audience of my oppressors.

Now don't get the wrong idea; it's a damn shame that we were forced to pick this fight....but if you hand me lemons I'm going to smash them and then laugh at you as I kick back and enjoy my lemonade.

Refused to go into make-up for interview out of fear for my own safety. Told her if I let her put make-up on me I would kick my own ass. :D
